the myths of the aztec and maya derive from a shared mesoamerican cultural tradition this is very much a living tradition and many of the motifs and gods mentioned in early sources are still evoked in the lore of contemporary Mexico and Guatemala. Professor Taube discusses the different sources for Aztec and Maya myths. The Aztec empire began less than 200 years before the Spanish conquest, and our knowledge of their mythology derives primarily from native colonial documents and manuscripts commissioned by the Spanish. Maya mythology is far older, and our knowledge of it comes mainly from native manuscripts of the Classic period, over 600 years before the Spanish conquest. Drawing on these sources as well as nineteenth and twentieth century excavations and research, including the interpretation of the codices and the decipherment of Maya hieroglyphic writing, the author discusses among other things the Popol Vuh myths of the Maya, the flood myth of northern Yucatan, and the Aztec creation myths.

This book discusses the origins of Aztec myths and how some of these myths have been manipulated over time. The book details the major gods found within the mythology, along with some of the most memorable tales such as the creation of the world and the making of humanity. Readers learn how Aztec myths have penetrated popular culture.

If you're looking for a captivating collection of Aztec myths, then keep reading. Indeed, in Aztec myths, the gods themselves make sacrifices of their own blood and even of their entire bodies in order to create a universe humans can live in. And in one story, to create humans themselves, humans therefore must make blood sacrifices in turn to feed the gods and to keep the universe in existence. To the ancient Aztecs, these practices seemed fitting, necessary, and honorable, helping to connect the world of humans to the divine world of the gods. A universe that in Aztec myth took shape in cycles of creation, destruction, and rebirth. in recent years a reawakening has taken place in the study of american archæology and antiquities owing chiefly to the labours of a band of scholars in the united states and a few enthusiasts in the continent of europe for the greater part of the nineteenth century it appeared as if the last word had been written upon mexican archæology the lack of excavations and exploration had cramped the outlook of scholars and there was nothing for them to work upon save what had been done in this respect before their own time the writers on central america who lived in the third quarter of the last century relied on the travels of stephens and norman and never appeared to consider it essential that the country or the antiquities in which they specialised should be examined anew or that fresh expeditions should be equipped to discover whether still further monuments existed relating to the ancient peoples who raised the teocallis of mexico and the huacas of peru true the middle of the century was not altogether without its americanist explorers but the researches of these were performed in a manner so perfunctory that but few additions to the science resulted from their labours modern americanist archæology may be said to have been the creation of a brilliant band of scholars who working far apart and without any attempt at co operation yet succeeded in accomplishing much among these may be mentioned the frenchmen charnay and de rosny and the americans brinton h h bancroft and squier to these succeeded the german scholars seler schellhas and förstemann the americans winsor starr savile and cyrus thomas and the englishmen payne and sir clements markham these men splendidly equipped for the work they had taken in hand were yet hampered by the lack of reliable data a want later supplied partly by their own excavations and partly by the painstaking labours of professor maudslay now the principal of the international college of antiquities at mexico who with his wife is responsible for the exact pictorial reproductions of many of the ancient edifices in central america and mexico writers in the sphere of mexican and peruvian myth have been few the first to attack the subject in the light of the modern science of comparative religion was daniel garrison brinton professor of american languages and archæology in the university of philadelphia he has been followed by payne schellhas seler and förstemann all of whom however have confined the publication of their researches to isolated articles in various geographical and scientific journals the remarks of mythologists who are not also americanists upon the subject of american myth must be accepted with caution the question of the alphabets of ancient america is perhaps the most acute in present day pre columbian archæology but progress is being made in this branch of the subject and several german scholars are working in whole hearted co operation to secure final results what has great britain accomplished in this new and fascinating field of science if the lifelong and valuable labours of the venerable sir clements markham be excepted almost nothing it is earnestly hoped that the publication of this volume may prove the means of leading many english students to the study and consideration of american archæology
